FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: Monday 2 November 2020

Rice Warner's FinTech footprint expands

Anthony Saliba is joining Rice Warner as Head of FinTech & Product Data.

A qualified actuary, senior manager and software developer, Anthony has over 10 years' experience in the financial services industry, with his most recent role being a senior actuary at AIA/Commlnsure. Anthony possesses a unique skill set and a passion for solving complex problems in the retirement income, banking and wealth management spaces and communicating results in innovative ways. He has a track record of delivering quality results to clients and has an in-depth knowledge of Australia's retirement income landscape.

Chief Executive Officer Andrew Boal is delighted to welcome Anthony to Rice Warner:

"Anthony is an excellent addition to the Rice Warner team with his specialised technical know-how. Our FinTech and Product Data teams will strengthen under his leadership, and his knowledge and experience will help us to deliver new and innovative financial models, calculators, online tools and other technical solutions for our clients."

Anthony, who will be based in Sydney, will lead Rice Warner's highly regarded FinTech & Product Data teams. His focus will be on developing client solutions at the intersection of retirement, advice and technology to meet the growing market demand in this area.

During his career, Anthony has worked on several major FinTech development projects, and is able to combine his intimate knowledge of modern systems and modelling techniques with his detailed understanding of the Australian retirement income landscape.

Anthony comments:

"The current uncertain environment creates unique opportunities for our clients. I am really excited to join the talented team at Rice Warner to help navigate these opportunities and deliver high quality solutions and research across all our clients."

Anthony commences with Rice Warner on Monday 2 November 2020.
